THEY GOT DUCKED.

A Pleasure Party Capsized in Lake Merritt.

THEY CLUNG TO THE UPTURNED VESSEL

And Were Heroically Rescued By Mayor Davie of Oakland.

Got a Ducking.

A fashionable luncheon party from San Francisco was rescued from Lake Merritt last evening by Mayor Davie. The party consisted of three ladies and three gentlemen, and, had the accident occurred after dark with the rising tide the consequences would have been appalling. As it was, a few ruined costumes and some probable colds constitute the damages.

Thomas F. Humphreys, whose home is on Peralta Heights, gave a luncheon party yesterday to some guests from San Francisco. After lunch it was proposed that the party take a sail on Lake Merritt. For several hours the little yacht on which they embarked sailed beautifully with the aid of the fresh breeze, and the party was returning when the accident occurred. In tacking the boat answered her helm so rapidly that the ladies did not have time to shift to the weather side before the sails were full. The wind was very fresh and as the yacht caught its force, with the ladies to leeward, it capsized on to its beam ends.

The ladies and gentlemen were thrown into the water and their screams at once attracted attention. The yacht sunk out of sight and the party stood on it and the outside sail. There was about four feet of water where the boat sunk, but there was several feet of soft mud, and the yacht and party were fast sinking out of sight when Mayor Davie rowed to the rescue.

The Mayor goes out every evening for an hour's rowing, and he was passing the yacht at a distance of about six hundred feet when the squall struck it. He pulled to the place, and after a long struggle succeeded in getting the three ladies aboard. His boat is a mere shell with no keel, and the water-logged ladies weighted it down considerably, and it was with difficulty that they were landed at the boat-house.

A yacht went to the rescue of the three men and brought them ashore. The yacht is stuck in the mud and will be raised tomorrow.

The party, as it returned to the Humphrey mansion, was the most woebegone that has ever been seen in the fashionable neighborhood of Peralta Heights. Old Tommy, the lake boatman, did all he could to help the unfortunates, but Tommy is not prepared to supply summer costumes for shipwrecked maids, and his efforts were confined to supplying them with a mat on which they kicked some of the mud off their feet and shook some ooze from their muddy garments. They then returned to the home of their host, leaving a muddy trail along [illegible]

New Plant.

The Berkeley Electric Light Company will shortly commence the erection of a large and commodious building on the corner of Channing Way and Third street West Berkeley, in which they will install their present plant and the new plant which has already been ordered.

The sum of $30,000 has been set apart by the company for this purpose, and the major portion of it will be spent in Berkeley among Berkeley merchants and Berkeley mechanics. The pay roll of the company for engineers, electricians and line men is considerable every month, and the new addition to the plant will increase it. Every dollar of the money is spent in Berkeley, and our business men and merchants should support the company liberally, for its success means Berkeley's success. One by one new enterprises are being established here which are doing much for the upbuilding of the town.

The ninth annual session of the Grand Circle of California Companions of the Forest opened in Oakland yesterday. The day was spent in the disposal of routine business and the appointment of committees.

PAYING OLD DEBTS.

A Stroke of Business that has not been Profitable for a Printer.

Paying Old Debts.

Charles L. Andrews, a Berkeley printer, hit upon a scheme for tiding over hard times, but Andrews is out some weeks work and has called down upon his head the wrath of scores of country newspapers.

Andrews proposed to supply the various State school districts of California with poster copies of those parts of the statutory law enforcing the educational rights of children, which it is required shall be posted for three weeks during the month of June.

The ingenious printer severed his connection with the Berkeley Advocate several weeks ago. As he did not receive from his late employers the moneys due him as a salary, the journal in question was made a partner in the school district poster scheme to the extent of being allowed to print the posters and furnish Andrews with office headquarters.

The posters were printed, and sent out, with a letter requesting that school boards that desired to use them send $1 50 to Charles L. Andrews of Berkeley.

Mr. Andrews is now awaiting returns but so far the principal result of his enterprising effort to get $5 per thousand for circulars is a lot of angry editorials in rural newspapers which resent the Berkeleyan's intrusion in their fields.

Up to the present time the scheme has been operated with indifferent success. Clerks who understand their duties have promptly returned the stationary or cast it into the waste basket. Another result is that Andrews has taken his back salary in trade with his exemployers.—S. F. Call.

At The Oakland Theater.

The Oakland theater has always been a first class family theater, giving good attractions but since Frank Bacon has assumed the management it has become equal to any of the high priced theaters. Last week he had Grace Plaisted and her talented company and they drew full houses every night of their engagement.

This week he has Hodges Dramatic Company, one of the best companies that has ever appeared in Oakland.

"La Belle Marie," is the play in which the leading parts are taken by Walter Hodges and Miss Elsie Tittle formerly a member of Charles Frohman Company, and her acting is simply grand in the double role of the innocent young girl, and that of the scheming French woman who hound's her betrayer to the prison door. The specialties by different members of the company are good and are well received.

Milton and Dollie Nobles California favorites will hold the boards next week in "From Sire to Son."

Notwithstanding these high priced companies and the extra cost of scenery and electrical and mechanical appliances, the popular prices of 10, 20, 25, and 50 cents still remain. The people of Berkeley, Oakland and Alameda have no need to spend their money in San Francisco as long as Mr. Bacon furnishes such attractions as he is now giving the public at the [illegible]

On the Mother Lode.

Professor Harrold Fairbanks, Ph. D. of the University of California, for several years connected with the State Mining Bureau, last night delivered the first of a series of lectures before the Gold Mining Exchange at Union-square Hall San Francisco.

The subject of the lecture was "The Mother Lode." General Turnbull felt unprepared to vouch for "Old Father Lode," but expressed great confidence in the character of Mother Lode.

Professor Fairbanks' paper was an able and exhaustive treatise on the character of the mother lode, giving its peculiarities as it runs through different counties, and he was listened to with great attention by an audience that filled the hall.

This lecture is to be followed by others with a purpose of increasing interest in gold mining in this State.

The Freshmen class of the University, this year promises to number between six and seven hundred young men and women, and the faculty are worrying themselves to devise ways and means for taking care of them all.

By the Name of Greenback Sent to Prison for Twenty-five Years.

Greenback Gets His Dues.

John Greenback, the highway robber whose audacious deeds bothered the police for some time, was sentenced to twenty-five years at hard labor at San Quentin by Judge Greene yesterday morning.

Greenback fared well until this trial when the court decided that his case was a hopeless one. The prisoner was unwilling to believe that the term was stated correctly, but Judge Greene smiled and replied that it was "only long enough to insure reflection."

Greenback was escorted out of court loudly protesting against the "life sentence," as he termed it.

Great Slaughter Of Furniture.

At J. L. An Angry Father Now Threatens to Kill the Lecherous Butcher On Sight.

Steinmeyer Has Fled.

Hugo Steinmeyer, a Watts' Tract butcher, and a man of family, is reported to have left town to escape the wrath of C. Olsen, father of Anna Olsen, also of North Oakland. The girl was employed as a domestic in Steinmeyer's family for three years. She is now about fifteen years old, and is soon to become a mother. Steinmeyer left a wife and four children in Oakland city. He has been a trustee of the English Lutheran Church and was considered an upright Christian man. He is also a Knight of Pythias.

Anna Olsen's father is a cripple from chronic rheumatism, and has a family of eight children. Recently the mortgage on his house was foreclosed. The girl Anna, and Olsen's wife have supported the family for some time. An attempt to get a warrant for Steinmeyer's arrest failed because the girl had passed the age of consent. He is about forty eight years old. His wife is only twenty five, and is in charge of Peralta Market on Hollis street, where Steinmeyer has been doing business as a butcher.

Mr. Olsen declares he will shoot Steinmeyer on sight and his sons are of the same mind.

Attorney Clunie, of San Francisco, has brought up the question of legality of the Southern Pacific Company charging ten-cent fares on the regular ferry boats when they charge but five cents on the Creek route, claiming that the ten-cent rate is unconstitutional. If he succeeds in making the five-cent fare stick, Oakland will be benefited but Berkeley, Alameda, Fruitvale and other points, that now pay ten cents, will have to pay the same fare. A five-cent fare on the local train to and from Oakland would be death to the merchants of that city. There is such a thing as fares being too cheap.

AFTER THE MURDERER

He Was Seen Yesterday Near Los Banos.

HAD TO VISIT A FARM FOR FOOD AND WATER.

John Hayes Hammond and His Companions Are Released From Jail.

Dunham Being Tracked.

Los Banos, June 4.—Reports still locate Murderer Dunham in this vicinity. Local officers are still alert and his trail still in a southward direction would indicate that he was making for the plains and would probably reach the river about Firebaugh.

At Tim O'Connor's place, about twelve miles northeast of Bells station, was found a freshly killed calf.

A little further on the searchers came across a lunch basket in which was part of the fresh meat.

Yesterday a man answering Dunham's description was seen at the ranch of Charles Jones, on Los Banos creek, about fourteen miles from town.

He made a raid on the garden taking all the ripe peas and turnips.

Later he was seen at Christople Padias, in Pedro Azule canyon, a small creek 22 miles southwest of Los Banos.

He went to the house for food and water, which he got. He was asked to stay all night, but refused, and seemed anxious to get away.

His shoes were pretty well worn, having the appearance of being used on rough roads.

Officers are now in that country, and the brush and timber are being thoroughly searched.

The country is settled mostly by Indians of a low type, who would aid and conceal any fugitive for money.

If he keeps in this direction he is bound to be caught. There are no cattle or sheep in the hills, and water is very scarce.

He will consequently be obliged to go to the houses for food and water.

Arrested For Murder.

New York, June 4.—The "Herald" this morning says:

Captain Cullen, Detective Farrell and Policemen Farley, Rooney and Curren of Brooklyn at an early hour this morning (Thursday) arrested a gang of Italians, who are suspected of being connected with the murder by Mafia agents of Salvado Serrio, who was killed in a room in the rear of a saloon last Thursday.

The bullet that killed Serrio was intended for Giacchino Cachierra, who escaped with a bullet wound in the arm and who is now in Raymond-street jail.

The men arrested are Ziocena Cocida, Golsippi Disosta, Giovanni Siorivere and Antonio Giviata.

The police also arrested Peter Custa, who tried to prevent Dective Farrell from making an arrest.

Did Not Go To Jail.

San Francisco, June 4.—Secretary [illegible] contempt of court.

When proceedings opened in Department 6 this morning Attorney Clunie announced that he had not had time to prepare the committment, and on his motion the matter went over until next Monday.

The prospects are that the preliminary examination of Assessor Siebe will soon cease, as Attorney Clunie remarked this morning that he would close to-day. The defense stated that not over one day would be required in presenting their side of the case.

John Hayes Hammond Released.

Johannesburg, June 4.—John Hays Hammond has been released.

This was the wording of a cablegram received this morning by E. A. Wiltse, the well-known mining expert, at his office in the Crocker building.

IMPURE WATER.

Dr. Rowell To Analyze The Water In the Company's Reservoir.

Water Users Complaint.

For sometime there has been more or less complaint about the smell of the city water in Berkeley. Of late it has got quite bad. This morning Health Officer Rowell and Sanitary Inspector Thompson went out to the Company's reservoir for the purpose of finding out the cause. Some people think it is on account of decayed vegetable matter while others assign various reasons.

The supply of water this year appears to be plenty for the Town's consumption, and it will be unfortunate if the smell which is somewhat nauseating cannot be abated. Dr. Rowell will make an analysis of the water and report.

BERKELEY BATH HOUSES.

At various times during the existence of the GAZETTE it has called public attention to the building of bath houses at the West end. Feeling that this work has become almost a necessity from the fact that nothing of the kind exists here, for the accommodation, either of its own people or for visitors, it again calls attention of the matter to public spirited men who can be of service to their fellow-men by a small outlay which will eventually come back in tenfold.

The shore frontage of Berkeley extends the full length of the town limits along its west line and affords in many places a splendid chance for the erection of bath houses which need not be of an expensive nature.

They will need attention probably of two persons, say a man and his wife, to keep them always in good order, to see that the bathing suits are always clean and whole, and to have a general care that no disturbances arise to prevent the comfort of its patrons.

At the present time nothing but an open beach presents itself, and, however, inviting the cool water may appear on a warm summer's day, no opportunities are offered for donning the bathing dress and taking the desired bath, to a great extent free from the public gaze of a noisy crowd which would be likely to assemble on such occasions.

By the erection of suitable buildings for protection and use, many ladies could take their children quite often during the summer, where they could disport in the salt water which covers a nearly level sandy beach for a long distance out towards the bay.

There are a great many days during the warm season when people, residing in San Francisco or Oakland, would be glad of the opportunity, if it were presented, to visit the sea-beach where the salt-laden, invigorating air comes in from the sea and enjoy the bath which all need ... best for health.

Perhaps for one or two seasons the patronage would be not more than enough to pay its running expenses, but after that, as it become known to the community at large, the income would increase and eventually become one of the best paying institutions on the coast.

What is necessary now is the having gentlemen of sufficient means and who are well known so as to give some stability to the investment to go ahead with this matter feeling that it is not for the day, but something which is intended to become permanent and like all lasting structures to be built upon a solid basis. The idea must prevail that as an investment it will take time. Some person or persons who can look ahead in this world and be satisfied that the outcome will eventually be large in dividends. It will require no large amount of money at first and the enterprise can be built up gradually, always keeping it a drawing order.

It is to be hoped that some of Berkeley's moneyed men may look into this matter fully and put into operation rather than let outsiders come in some fine day and pick up a gold nugget, which has always been at our feet and overlooked from the fact that our eye sight has been directed to visions in far off countries.

ANONYMOUS WRITERS.

A communication was received at this office today in reference to the expenditures of the Board of Education, which the writer desired published. At the end of his communication he wound up with this sentence, "I do not think it is necessary for me to sign my name to an article like this," and of course omitted his name.

It is a rule of this office and of all newspaper offices that communications intended for publication should invariably be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

The communication received today makes some serious charges against the Board of Education in its expenditure of school monies, and the writer should at least give this office his name when he makes charges that might have to be proved. Without the name of the writer we would under no circumstances publish the communication.

The State that President Cleveland has depended upon so much to endorse his policy has given him the cold shoulder, and in the Democratic State Convention of Kentucky held yesterday, hisses followed the mention of his name when a delegate got up and stated "that Grover Cleveland stands to-day as the equal in devotion to the best interests of our Government and faithful service of any President that has preceded him in office, and the country is indebted to the Democratic party for his election and I doubt not that you will give him your support." This was indeed a snub for President Cleveland, coming from the home of Secretary Carlisle whom the President had hoped to nominate at the coming convention to be held in Chicago.

Orange County is going to be one of the busiest and most prosperous parts of California this year. This is the opinion of citizens in the best possible position to know the facts regarding Orange county's productions, and the outlook for a crop this year. The barley crop, despite the discouraging outlook early in the season, will be above the average, and, as good prices are assured, the crop will bring in an immense amount of money this summer. Deciduous fruits will do fairly well on the whole as, while there is by no means a full crop, it is probable that much better prices than usual will be obtained.—Santa Ana Blade.

A PORCH IN BELGRAVIA.

When, afterdawn, the lordly house hide
[illegible] some pitiful guest,
[illegible] the dumb stones gather to their breast,
Her gold hair rough, her robe garment wide,
Who sleeps, with all that inland life denied,
Cramped round and dreams now seaward and southwest
Pass over Devon farms the smoke rings rest,
And sheep and lambs ascend the lit hillside.

Dare of your charity, meek low, step soft;
[illegible]
Best heirs of all age sometimes set aloft
[illegible] cannot pass, nor yet deplore
Even from itself, enawned wrong inscrutable,
Which of man have seen forevermore.

—Louise Imogen Guiney.

WITHIN AN INCH.

The windows of the restaurant were open, and the cool, fragrant air of the spring night was struggling with the smoke laden atmosphere of the room. A glance out of doors showed the azure sky and the brilliant full moon, whose glimmering bluish rays shone through the young foliage of the blossoming trees, which swayed gently to and fro before the windows in the light breeze. But nothing was more remote from the minds of our circle, which met every evening at a certain table for social intercourse, than poetical ideas. The club, of which I was one, consisted principally of worthy citizens who had a far greater liking for bright gaslight than for dim moonlight and who appreciated the charms of a good supper much more than the spell of the loveliest spring night. The topic of our conversation was prosaic town gossip, which, as usual, gradually merged into foolish talk about politics or discussions concerning the government, the theater, high taxes and similar subjects. By a connection of ideas which I do not now recall the question had arisen whether it was credible that a person's hair could suddenly turn gray from violent mental excitement. Part of the company received the anecdotes current about such cases with slight doubts, while others most pitilessly derided persons who were simple enough to believe such nursery tales.

Just as the conversation became most animated a man of unusual height and herculean frame, whom we had not previously noticed, rose from a side table and approached us. His intelligent features, which bore the stamp of resolution, seemed spiritualized by the large, kindly blue eyes. But the most striking peculiarity in his appearance was the snow white hair and the gray beard framing his face, which, at the utmost, indicated an age of only 35 years.

"Pardon me if I enter into your conversation," he said, bowing courteously.

"You are speaking of a subject which greatly interests me. I myself am a living proof that terrible mental agitation really does exert the physical influence which you all doubt."

His words awakened the utmost interest. We made room for him at our table, and after he had taken his seat we unanimously urged him to tell us what had caused the whiteness of his hair.

The stranger feigned to undue modesty, but yielded to our entreaties and related the following story:

"If you have ever paid any attention to American affairs, the name of Auburn cannot be unfamiliar. It has about the same significance in the United States as Spielberg has in Austria. You must not imagine Auburn as an immense gloomy prison, a single large building, but rather a whole town of criminals—a metropolis of the miserable outcasts of society. Inclosed by enormous walls, which rise menacingly to a considerable height above the plain, are a great number of single structures, houses which contain the cells of the prisoners, the residences of the wardens, barracks, hospitals and workshops, all desolate and dreary, with here and there a bit of turf, a row of trees, a bed of flowers, like an innocent memory of childhood among the evil thoughts of a criminal.

"Circumstances which I will not weary you by recounting had led me, after completing my education in my native city, Hamburg, to America, and after a brief time in New York I found myself prison surgeon in Auburn, which, as perhaps you know, is in the state of New York.

"I had charge of a part of the prison which contained white [illegible] criminals, then, or rather human hyenas, to whom blood had ceased to be a very special fluid, as Mephistopheles terms it. Two, who were condemned to lifelong imprisonment in that institution and were distinguished among the others by great bodily strength, craftiness and intelligence, had, in consequence of repeated bold and cunning attempts to escape, been placed under more rigid oversight than the rest. I had incurred their special hate because I had once caused the discovery of several iron tools, which—heaven knows how obtained—they had concealed under their clothing, and on another occasion discovered that they were shamming when, on the plea of illness, they desired to be placed in the hospital, probably because they hoped to find the conditions there more favorable for their plans of escape. The scoundrels were separated and heavily chained, but nevertheless one morning one and a few days later the other vanished, chains and all, without leaving a trace. About a fortnight afterward I went to Cayuga Bridge on some private business.

"It was noon when I reached the end of my ride, and I gazed with delight at the sunlit land case before my eyes. Cayuga lake, one of those which, with Lake Erie, form the network of inland lakes in New York, lay before me in its peculiar loveliness. Between rugged, rocky shores, confronting each other like sullen foes, the long, narrow sheet of silver extended its clear surface as if striving to reconcile the two enemies who had stared defiantly at each other for centuries. Across the lake, which is about 40 miles long, and at this point a mile wide, the railway trains run on an immense wooden bridge, a marvel of American enterprise, which has a station at Cayuga Bridge, an insignificant village.

"My business was soon completed, and toward evening I set out on my way home. Accompanied with the pleasure of a [illegible] Cayuga Bridge is surrounded by extensive oak forests, through which I had to ride a considerable distance. The huge, lofty trunks cast long shadows, and the tops rustled so softly that one rather felt than heard them. As I passed through these woodland giants sweet memories of my faroff home stole into my heart. Absorbed in thought, I loosened the bridle of my horse, which trotted slowly forward. I admired the bewitching blending of colors produced by the rays of the setting sun, as they shone through the dense, dark green foliage and seemed to kindle the edges of the leaves. Suddenly I was roused from my dreams by a rustling in the underbrush on both sides of the road. I seized my pistol and turned quickly, but at the same moment received a terrible blow, which deprived me of my senses. True, I opened my eyes once more and fancied I saw indistinctly, as if in a dream, one of the escaped criminals bending over me; then darkness shrouded my mind.

"It must have been late at night when consciousness returned. I opened my eyes and saw above me in the deep blue sky a radiant full moon. A dull, heavy sensation in the back of my head made me try to put my hand on the aching spot, but I discovered that I was bound hand and foot. Gradually I collected my thoughts, remembered the attack by highwaymen, and a terrible foreboding, which made my heart stop beating, darted through my brain. I felt that I was laid across two sharp parallel projections, which pressed against me most painfully, and, listening intently, I heard, far below me, a faint plashing noise. There was no doubt. I was lying across the rails of the Cayuga bridge, bound, unable to move, with the terribly certain prospect of being cut into three pieces by the next train.

"I almost lost consciousness again. But I soon recovered my composure. Then I tugged desperately at my bonds till they almost cut my muscles, shrieked and at last wept like a child. I tried to roll myself into a different position and remembered that an incautious movement would hurl me into the silent waves or the cayuga gs bound hand and foot, motionless as a stone.

"I shuddered and lay still, but not long. The light of the large, to me fearfully brilliant moon, the splashing of the water below, the wind blowing softly, then the deathlike silence again, rarely interrupted even by the distant note of a bird—all became unendurable and inspired me with unspeakable terror. And the rails! The rails! My senses tortured me. I could not escape them. The wooden beams of the bridge trembled almost imperceptibly from the washing of the water. I imagined I felt the approach of the train, and my hair bristled. The wind sighed a little louder, I fancied I heard the dull panting of the engine, and my heart stood still, only to throb the next instant with such dreadful speed that the pulsations were almost audible.

"There are some things, gentlemen, which are totally incomprehensible to me. One of them is how I survived that night. One thought stood distinctly before my mind: I must endeavor to work myself into another position—if possible, get into the space between the rails—if I was not, perhaps the next moment, to become the victim of the most agonizing death.

"And I succeeded! I strained every muscle, every sinew to the point of breaking. I writhed, I twisted, I panted, my head seemed bursting, and after tremendous exertion, which appeared to me to last an eternity, though perhaps it was only moments, I found myself in the hollow between the rails.

"Was I safe? I had not time to consider or rejoice in my new hope, for all my vital powers were concentrated in the single sense of hearing. In the far distance I distinguished, at first vaguely, then more and more distinctly, the regular, monotonous, dull noise which is produced by the engine of a moving locomotive. The awful silence of the night merged minute by minute into the still more awful, confused jarring sounds, the rattling and groaning, rumbling and panting of the locomotive, which was rushing forward at the mad speed of American trains. A thousand feet more, 500—all the terrors of the infernal regions assailed me, but not a muscle moved. I lay as if turned to stone. I tried to shriek, but did not even hear my own voice. How should it reach those on the train?

"Now, for an infinitely brief space of time, I fancied that I saw a bright light, a blast of hot air fanned me, then suddenly darkness shrouded me. I heard a thundering roar, as though the very heavens were falling.

"Close, very close, barely an inch above, the monster dashed over me. I was safe. Still half unconscious, I heard a deafening rumbling and clattering and saw shadowy masses flit by. There was another moment of mortal dread; the hook of a chain which hung lower than the rest caught me, dragging me along a few feet, and finally tore a large piece from the breast of my coat, releasing me; then every object danced around me, the moon, the bridge and the high bank whirled in a giddy maze above and below me, and my senses failed.

"When I regained my consciousness, I found myself in my bed, with familiar faces around me. To make the story short, I had been picked up the morning after that terrible night by a signalman, recognized and taken to Auburn. A violent fever kept me for a fortnight within the shadow of death, but my strong constitution conquered. When, after my recovery, I looked in the glass for the first time, I saw what traces those moments had left upon me."

The physician paused. His pallid face, the expression of horror in his eyes, the perspiration which stood in large drops upon his brow, showed how vivid must be his remembrances of the scene and how greatly the narration had exhausted him.

Gradually the breathless anxiety with which we had listened to the story related with such graphic power passed away, and cheerfulness returned.

Then we paced to and fro for a long time in the moonlight, in the garden behind the tavern, listening to the doctor's tales of less harrowing experiences in the young land of liberty, wonders and adventure.—Translated From the French by Max Nordau For New York Herald.

Raised an Interesting Technicality.

Every schoolboy knows that the eye of the law is so far color blind that two blacks sometimes make a white for it. But the Newcastle-under-Lyme milkman, who has been unsuccessfully appealing from his petty sessions to the queen's bench, preferred to try a new way of getting on the law's color blind side. He did not deny that his milk was adulterated—not he! But he pointed out that it was a Sunday on which he sold it, and that there was a law of George II making such sale illegal on that day, except in the early morning and after 4 o'clock. Consequently there had been no legal sale at all, and therefore he had not sold adulterated milk. Perhaps it is as well that his point was not upheld. It might have been "the thin end of the wedge," and presently we should have had a burglar breaking into our house and shooting us, and then escaping the gallows on the ground that, as his entry had been burglarious, he was not legally there at all, and so could plead an alibi against the capital charge.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Trilby Knew Not.

"Trilby," said the Laird, as he put on his galoshes, "why are a tight pair of rubbers like Little Billee?"

Trilby said she didn't know.

"Because," replied the Laird, "they draw your feet."

RAILROAD YARD TERRORS.

Even Trainmen Cannot Cross the Tracks at Night Without Fear.

"It's hard for the ordinary traveler to realize the terrors of the average railroad yard," said an old and experienced trainman at one of the big Jersey City terminals to a reporter. "The commuter who scans the yards daily as he is smoothly riding through them naturally enough fails to appreciate the mass of detail in the duties of the men who are employed to switch him safely into the station. Of course the routine work we do, fraught with responsibility and danger as it is, becomes mechanical enough to us in time, but there is one thing that I have never been able to do with coolness in all the years I have been employed here, and that is to cross this network of tracks at night. The experience of Thomas Bouker, the freight clerk at the Lehigh Valley station in Communipaw, is proof that I am not the only hardened railroader afflicted in that way. Bouker was run down by an engine because he got bewildered in the maze of tracks. I don't blame him. Why, it's enough to give a man heart disease to attempt to cross such an aggregation of rails, with a lot of headlights moving all around him and scores of bells and whistles ringing in his ears.

"Every time that I am compelled to make such a trip—and I only do so nowadays when I am compelled to—I get the lay of the land well in my mind and note which engines are moving and which are not, but it is of no use. By the time I'm in the middle of the yard my head is in a whirl, the headlights are dancing all around me, and I skip and dodge around frantically until I get safely on the other side. Usually most of the locomotives are standing still in the train shed, but it's hard to believe it when you are in front of them. Some commuters who work in Jersey City have a trick of walking into the station from the yard to save the trouble of going around by the regular way, but when I can I always warn them of the danger of doing so."—New York Sun.

The points of a crossbill's mandibles do not meet, but cross each other. This peculiarity is of great service to the bird in forcing open the pine burs, on the seeds of which it feeds.
